

Best Of

This year, EPA introduced the "Best Of" awards as part of the Best Workplaces for Commuters Race to Excellence.

EPA is presenting these awards to three Employee Transportation Coordinators (ETCs) from a Best Workplaces for Commuters-designated university, a FORTUNE 500 company, and a BWC District.

Universities, FORTUNE 500 companies, and business districts represent important sectors for Best Workplaces for Commuters because employers in these sectors have taken the lead in offering outstanding commuter benefits. These employers have risen to the top as industry leaders. The "Best of" ETCs have done an excellent job promoting their organization's designation as one of the Best Workplaces for Commuters. In addition, the ETCs submitted outstanding Race to Excellence applications describing their impressive accomplishments. Some of their achievements include:

- Integrating Best Workplaces for Commuters into existing programs and services.
- Promoting the Best Workplaces for Commuter brand in new and innovative ways.
- Expanding their employee's commuter benefit options.
- Recruiting new worksites to the Best Workplaces for Commuters list.

We recognize the following ETCs in these three sectors who went above and beyond the call of duty!

Stephanie Manning, Stanford University, Best University

Wendy Weaver, The Boeing Company, Best from the FORTUNE 500

Marci McGuire, Bishop Ranch Transportation Association, Best BWC District

"Best Workplaces for Commuters applauds these ETCs for successfully promoting their Best Workplaces for Commuters designation and commuter benefits as a whole in these key sectors. They have helped make their employer an industry leader."
